

Table 1. Food for Thought articles written by distinguished luminaries in marine science, including author, country of current residence of the author, title of the article, date published, and the number of views on the IJMS website as of 11 October 2018. The articles are available for downloading at <https://academic.oup.com/icesjms/pages/luminaries>.

Author	Country	Title of article	Date published	Views
Brian Rothschild	US	On the birth and death of ideas in marine science	11/03/15	1350
Emory Anderson	US	Lessons from a career in fisheries science	28/05/15	1103
Ken Sherman	US	Sustaining the world's large marine ecosystems	15/09/15	621
Ken Able	US	Natural history: an approach whose time has come, passed, and needs to be resurrected	22/04/16	584
Daniel Pauly	Canada	Having to science the hell out of it	22/04/16	1434
Ray Hilborn	US	Of mice, fishermen, and food	16/06/16	1099
Kevern Cochrane	South Africa	An integrated view of fisheries: tunnelling between silos	13/12/16	1012
Marc Mangel	US	Know your organism, know your data	08/01/17	888
Malcolm Jobling	Norway	More than a fair share of good luck	15/02/17	487
Lawrence Dill	Canada	Behavioural ecology and marine conservation: a bridge over troubled water?	30/03/17	741
David MacLennan	UK	Reflections on technology and science in fishery research	07/04/17	549
François Gerlotto	France	Sixteen lessons from a 40-year quest to understand the mysterious life of the grey triggerfish	25/05/17	323
Steven Campana	Iceland	Twelve easy steps to embrace or avoid scientific petrification: lessons learned from a career in otolith research	31/08/17	7314
Gustav-Adolf Paffenhöfer	US	How cooperation contributes to scientific advances	05/10/17	297
Beatriz Morales-Nin	Spain	Dealing with time: a career in fish and fisheries	02/12/17	576
Colin Clark	Canada	Modelling the behaviour of fishers and fishes	09/12/17	431
Theodore Packard	Spain	From Thoreau's woods to the Canary Islands: exploring ocean biogeochemistry through enzymology	11/12/17	168
Joanne Morgan	Canada	Understanding biology to improve advice for fisheries management	22/12/17	440
Jennifer Purcell	US	Of jellyfish, fish, and humans	09/01/18	838
Rosemary Ommer	Canada	Curiosity, interdisciplinarity, and giving back	05/04/18	353
Keith Brander	Denmark	Seeing through	20/04/18	380
Thomas Quinn	US	From magnets to bears: is a career studying salmon narrow or broad?	09/05/18	1551
Randall Peterman	Canada	Continuous learning, teamwork, and lessons for young scientists	05/10/18	22